MANY NATIONS MEET IN ROME

Representatives From All the World There

Rome, Nov. 20—King Victor Emanuel opened the first session of the International Institute of Agriculture today in the magnificent palace erected for that purpose on the grounds of the famous Villa Borghese. Delegates representing forty-six in all parts of the world were in attendance when the opening took place. The king, surrounded by his suite, entered the hall at 10 o'clock, and was greeted with an ovation that extended through several minutes.

The organization of the institute which owes its existence to His Majesty, will be completed during today's sessions, after which an elaborate program will be carried out. It is proposed to create a number of special departments, each having special jurisdiction over different branches of the work. Phases of agriculture to be given special attention will be the gathering of crop statistics in all parts of the world, collecting of information relative to wages paid for farm work, new diseases of vegetation and effective remedies, agricultural co-operation, insurance and credit, simplification of weights and measures and many others.

The original purpose of the institute was the gathering of statistics relative to the world's crops, and this purpose will be carried out to the letter. It is hoped thereby to effect an enormous saving to the inhabitants of the world, and to counteract the influence that now manipulate and falsify for individual gain information about crops.

The palace where the meetings are being held and the exhibits displayed was built by the king, who also bestowed upon the institute estates which will yield annually nearly $700,000. The United States has a large delegation at the institute.

PAVING MUDDLE

Courts to Take a Hand in Oklahoma City Trouble

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 20.—The courts have taken a hand in Oklahoma City's paving muddle, and an injunction of recent awards of contracts to various paving companies is now pending in Judge Carney's court. The fight grows out of the action of the council in revoking the awards of contracts to the Parker-Washington people. They awarded the entire paving job to the Conway company, on a five year guarantee plan, after a campaign had been waged against what was termed to be an extravagant expenditure of the city's paving funds.

Location for College

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 20.—The question of the proposed location for the state Baptist college, which is to be settled by a special locating committee of the Baptist organization on Feb. 3, is just now engaging the attention of business men here. Several sites have been offered in various parts of the city, and the contest for the location is expected to be interesting.

A Glossy Coat.

The beauty of the horse is increased by a glossy coat. This is especially desirable, if the horse is to be offered for sale. There are two things that go to produce the glossy coat, and they are, good feeding and good currying. The latter brings out the gloss that is in the oil that is supplied by the glands to the hair to keep it in a normal condition. Good food consists in giving enough of a grain ration, so that the animal may have an abundance of material out of which to make muscle and fatty tissue. Not till the animal is able to supply the needs of the muscular tissue does he begin to lay up a coat of fat under the skin. This makes the skin and hair of better character than when the material for the fat formation is lacking.

WHY NOT MORE SHEEP?

A Query Which Every Farmer Should Thoughtfully Consider.

Probably the main reason more farmers do not keep sheep is because they do not understand them. You ask them why, and one will say sheep will not pay on high-priced land; another will say cattle and hogs will make more profit; another, they require too much fencing, and still another will aver that they are too much bother. Are all these objections well grounded? Ask the man who has been raising sheep for the last five years. He will tell you that sheep will yield as good if not better profit than any other class of live stock, considering the expense one is put to in getting started and for care.

Sheep bring in profits from two sources—namely, lambs and wool. Not only are they valuable in that way, but there is no other class of live stock that will return such a large amount of fertility to the soil. They have fifty been termed "the golden hoof that enriches the soil." As to the high-priced land proposition, if they did not pay it it is not probable they would be kept continuously on some of the highest-priced farms in England, says Good-sall's Farmer. Of course it is hard to make a farmer in the corn belt, with land at $100 or more per acre, believe this, for he has grown up to the idea of raising corn and feeding cattle.

While the profits from sheep raising are not always constant and will at times cease to be a profit, says the Farmers' Voice, the same is true with other classes of live stock. At present the prices of sheep and lambs on our markets are not as good as they were a few months ago, but the man who is in the business to stay will undoubtedly see better conditions in the not far distant future. High prices for feed are somewhat of a handicap to feeders of all kinds of live stock, and this may be one of the years when the profits are not so big. But it is the man who keeps at it who makes the money. Good management will count for as much if not more with the flock as with the herd of cattle or drove of hogs. The flocks that do not pay are the neglected ones—the ones kept by men who do not understand sheep. With the least trouble of any farm stock, the sheep with its two-fold source of income will build up the depleted farm and make the productive one grow bigger crops.

Nitrogen in Animal Charcoal.

Why animal charcoal removes the color from colored liquids, while wood charcoal has no effect, has not been understood. A European chemist now finds that the action of the former is due to the presence of five to seven per cent of nitrogen.
